Emigranti - a series: Alice Di Certo

Jan. 2-Mar. 16, 2018

Reception • Jan. 25, 2018 • 5-7 p.m.

Di Certo's title for the series, Emigranti, ("One who leaves his own country to reside in another" <https://english.stackexchange.com>) places the accent on what is left behind rather than what one comes to. It is easy to forget that moving to a new country, leaving one's birth land and abandoning one's culture and language, leaves an invisible mark, an unseen scar. Italian immigrants today, as opposed to people coming from countries ravaged by war, extreme poverty, autocratic regimes, and chronic unemployment, or even to the Italians of previous generations, typically leave Italy under less trying circumstances. Yet still, we share some of the same feeling of longing, of yearning for what we left behind. One common struggle for us immigrants is language, the accent we carry, which those of us who moved here as adults, we will never fully lose.
